U.K. Rejects Death Penalty For Terrorists

LONDON — Members of the House of Commons decisively rejected on Wednesday the restoration of capital punishment for terrorist murders.

The vote of 361-245 against restoration of the penalty for terrorist crimes, a majority of 116 in the 650seat House, came on an amend-ment to a bill to restore capital ent for murder.

The vote foreshadowed total defeat of a return to hanging in Ri-tain for the fifth time since capital punishment was suspended in 1965 and "permanently" abolished in

New York Times Service WASHINGTON — The United States has told Poland that it will take steps to relax some of the sanctions imposed at the time martial law was declared if Warsaw releases a significant number of political prisoners, it was reported Wednesday.

This message was conveyed to Poland's charge d'affaires, Zdzis-law Ludwiczak, by Lawrence S. Eagleburger, the U.S. undersecretary of state for political affairs, last week in the most substantive meeting between the two nations in

Hoping to lend encouragement to Polish authorities to carry out some liberalizing steps in coming weeks, the Reagan administration told the Poles that if substantial numbers of political prisoners were released, the United States would agree to join with other Western nations on July 29 to consider reschednling Poland's outstanding debt to Western nations, thereby allowing Poland to be eligible again

Poland owes Western governments and banks approx billion is to governments. It owes the U.S. government about $2 bil-

Washington would also permit Poland to negotiate with the United States to recover some of the fishing rights in U.S. waters that were taken away as one of the sanctions announced by President Ronald Reagan in 1981.

Mr. Reagan imposed the sanctions two weeks after the Polish leader, General Wojciech Jaruzelski, announced the suspension of civil liberties, the arrest of thousands of political figures and the disbanding of Solidarity, the independent trade union. Other sanctions will remain, such as the ban on economic assistance and on the sale of high technology. So will the revoking of Poland's normal tariff status by Mr. Reagan in October 1982 after Solidarity was declared illegal.

Polish authorities have allowed articles to appear in the controlled press in recent days suggesting that certain measures may be taken in coming weeks in connection with the Polish national holiday on July 22. U.S. officials remain skeptical.

One U.S. official noted that the Polish authorities formally suspended martial law at the end of 1982, but retained many of its provisions. There are believed to be as many as 4,000 to 5,000 political prisoners still in detention, although the Polish government asserts that there are fewer than 200.

Despite the suspension of martial law, military courts still handle many cases, and important mines and factories, as well as the transportation system, remain militarized. Moreover, the civil criminal code was enlarged to include certain of the suspended martial law pamphlets, films, tapes or publications, and making the creation of disorder a crime. What officials here are paying closer attention to is the possibility of an amnesty for political prisoners as well as for opponents of the government who are in hiding. The Poles were told specifically that the rescheduling of debts and the restoration of some fishing rights would be in response to a significant release of prisoners, of-negotiators made a new proposal last week that would limit the United States and the Soviet Union to about 1,100 multiple-warhead missiles and bombers, according to U.S. officials, but would let Moscow keep all the large missiles that most threaten the United States.

The proposal was made in Gene-va at the U.S.-Soviet negotiations on long-range nuclear weapons.

The officials said the continued unwillingness of the Soviet Union to reduce its force of about 640 large SS-18 and SS-19 missiles means that the new proposal still siles, which are fails to deal with the weapons and threatening. about which the United States is

But the new proposal may represent the most important move by the Soviet Union in a pattern of stepped-up activity in recent weeks at the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, or START. Although U.S. officials describe that activity as generally cosmetic so far, they are still analyzing the new move to de-termine whether it is a signal that more serious bargaining can take warhead missiles, or MIRVs, than it agreed to in the 1979 SALT-2 strategic arms limitation agreemen with the United States. That accord was never ratified by the United

But the key stumbling block remains the large Soviet missiles. The United States contends that the 308 SS-18s, which can carry 10 warheads each, and the approximately 330 six-warhead SS-19s theoretically are capable of wiping out U.S. land-based missiles in a first strike. The Reagan administration insists that the threat be removed.

Soon after the negotiations began in June 1982 the Soviet Union proposed an overall limit of 1,800 on what Moscow cells "strategic nuclear activery vehicles," mean ocean-spanning missiles and range of cruise missiles carried aboard U.S. bombers. U.S. officials said the original Soviet demands were unacceptable.

Last week, according to the officials, the Soviet Union proposed a subceiling of 1,100 on MTRV missiles and bombers within the overall ceiling of 1,800 strategic nuclear

The Soviet Union was reported to have further divided this into three separate limits: one for bombers equipped with long-range cruise missiles, another for a com-bined total of all submarine-based and land-based MIRV missiles and a third for land-based MIRV missiles, which are the most accurate

Soviet negotiators, however, placed no restriction on which specific missiles could be f.elded within the general categories. Officials suggested that the Soviet proposal would allow about 700 land-based multiple-warhead missiles, which would mean all the existing SS-18s and SS-19s, plus some four-warhead SS-17s, to be retained or replaced by more modern versions. It also reportedly would allow for about 150 missilepoed bombers.

The new Soviet proposal reportedly follows closely the formula in arlier SALT-2 accord. Under SALT-2, both sides would have frozen their total missile and mit of 1,320 on MIRV missiles plus missile-equipped bombers, with a maximum of 820 of those MIRV missiles on land.

Moscow is now suggesting 1,800 total weapons with a sublimit of 1,100 MIRVs, about 700 of those on land, sources said. The original U.S. proposal at the strategic arms talks called for each side to have only 850 missiles. But President Ronald Reagan recently announced that he would increase that number, if necessary, to what officials said would be about 1,100

Soviet Flexibility Reported

Two top U.S. spokesmen said Wednesday that the Soviet Union recently presented new data elaborating on its strategic arms position, giving rise to hope that the Soviet Union may be introducing some flexibility. The Associated Press reported from Washington.

Larry M. Speakes, the White House deputy pre-secretary, and John R. Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, refused in identically worded statements to confirm or deny the specifies of a published report in The Washingion Post that the Soviet Union now as proposed limiting each side to 1,100 strategic bombers and multiole-warbead nuclear missiles.

ROME (UPI) — Peace and War, a leftist magazine, said Wednesday it had received photocopies of telegrams indicating that the U.S. ambassador in Rome, Maxwell M. Rabb, had worked out a plan to link Bulgaria to the shooting in 1981 of Pope John Paul II and thus discredit the Soviet

"No such telegrams were ever sent," the U.S. Embassy responded. "We assume that the two documents are intended to discredit the United States as well as the Italian magistracy that is investigating the possible involvement of Bulgarian agents in the papel assessmation attempt."

The weekly magazine said it received the photocopies of the purported telegrams in the mail, but it did not know who sent them:

sentence for illegal possession of arms and amount

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Trade Commission ruled Wednesday that advertising claims for some of the nation's best-known, over-the-counter pain relievers have been misleading and ordered the drug manufacturers to drop claims of superiority unless they have proof. The decision affects Bufferin, Excedein, Bayer Aspirin, Cope, Van-quish and Midol products made by Bristol-Myers Co. and Sterling Drug

Such claims as Exceding being better than aspirin and Bayer being superior to other brands of aspirin have not been adequately substantiated and must be dropped unless clinical proof is provided, the FTC ruled. The commission also said Bristol-Myers had falsely claimed that doctors recommend Bufferin more than any other nonprescription pain relieves. The ruling also said Sterling lacked support for claims that its Bayer products have greater purity, stability, freshness or disintegration speed.

Israelis to Settle in Heart of Hebron

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Wednesday that Israel will rebuild Hebron's Jewish quarter, settling Jews in the heart of the Arab city on the occupied West Bank.

Mr. Arens dismissed arguments that Jews should not settle in the center of a heavily populated Arab region. "Such an argument is totally unacceptable in a democratic country like Israel," he told the Kaesset. "Just as we reconstructed the Jewish quarter in Jerusalem, we will reconstruct the Jewish quarter in Hebron, which was destroyed in 1929." U.S. Tests Blood Substance In Treating AIDS Patients

NEW YORK - Researchers at the National Institutes of Health have begun preliminary experiments on patients who have AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, to determine if a naturally occurring substance could be used to treat the usually fatal disease. The substance, called interleukin-2 is so named because it is derived from a type of leukocyte, or white blood cell. Interleukin-2 has been found capable of fighting infection in test-tube experiments with cells from AIDS victims. Dr. Anthony S. Fauci of the health institutes said Tuesday that the study is involving only four AIDS patients because of the high cost of interleukin-2, about $125,000 per patient. Three of the four received first doses of the substance earlier this week, he said

Agreement at Madrid

Mark down the Madrid conference on European detente as the occasion for Ronald Reagan's first formal agreement with the Soviet Union and Yuri Andropov's first with America. Against the tension otherwise clouding Soviet-American relations, this demonstration of a capacity to come to terms is the most important result of the negotiations on human rights, cooperation and security that the two countries have been conducting, with 30-odd European states, for almost three years.

The agreement has not actually been signed but there seems no doubt that it will be soon. Moscow is not in the habit of pulling the rug out from under its own negotiators. Mr. Reagan has done it only when the negotiators were under his predecessor's instructions.

Credit is due to the negotiator, Max Kampelman, originally Jimmy Carter's appointee. What made it possible for him to continue effectively from one administration to the next was the emphasis of each on keeping in step with America's allies and friends. Washington accepted Madrid as a forum devoted first to building Atlantic unity, and it deferred to the Europeans' obvious special interest in broadening European détente.

The agreement keeps alive and vigorous the "Helsinki process" begun in the 1970s. Moscow accepted it to win favor for political objectives in Europe; the West accepted it to make life in both parts of Europe more humane and regular. The process committed the signers to obligations and, for enforcement, to a continuing series of conferences at which delivery on those obligations is reviewed.

The Madrid conference reviewed Soviet performance in Poland and Afghanistan and on the matter of human rights in general. It tightened marginally the language of the obliga-tions to which the signers will henceforth be held. It set up a schedule of eight future ses-sions, some on the expert level, some on the political. One of these, starting in Stockholm next January, will give the Kremlin some chance to make propaganda hay on disarmament. But the session is to address first "confidence-building measures" (advance notice of military maneuvers, for instance) meant to ease the West's fear of a Soviet surprise attack. It is gritty work to push Moscow to observe human rights commitments adopted in much cynicism. But it would be an unconscionable denial of its basic values if the West, having once taken up the task, put it down.

Sudden Civil Rights

During the months before the last mayoral election in Washington there was a flurry of road repair work the like of which has not been seen since the reign of Caesar Augustus. Potholes were filled, curbs replaced, streets swept. "Politics," sniffed the cynical. We saw no harm and in fact lots of precedent for this kind of connection. We feel the same way about the recent spurt of activity over at the civil rights division in the Justice Department.

For two-and-a-half years no one in the Rea-gan administration, least of all the man in charge of enforcing the civil rights laws, William Bradford Reynolds, appeared to care a great deal about the very real problems that continue to burden minorities in America. We heard a lot about what was wrong with busing and affirmative action; there was an unconscionable hesitancy to endorse the extension of the Voting Rights Act, and little interest in initiating lawsuits, let alone expanding rights such as the one guaranteeing fair housing.
Suddenly there has been a pronounced and very public change. In the space of a few weeks

Mr. Reynolds has visited Mississippi with the Rev. Jesse Jackson and returned convinced that there is still widespread voter discrimination in that state; he has vowed to act. Then the president announced that he would send to Congress a new fair housing bill that would put the government squarely into the business of fighting individual cases of discrimination. Just this week the Justice Department filed suit against the state of Alabama, alleging the continuation of a racially separate state uni-versity system. Granted that the government had been ordered by a federal district court in Washington to cut off Alabama's funds or to secure compliance with the law, the Justice Department's action this week signals a tougher position on last-ditch segregation. It is the first such suit filed by the Reagan administration, and it is an important step. Has all this been undertaken with an eve to neutralizing black hostility in the 1984 election? Maybe. But, like the filled potholes and the resurfaced roads, it is welcome.

Hong Kong on the Table

When Chairman Mao's Red Guards were rampaging through Hong Kong, terrorizing the colony, it was said that China could take Hong Kong with a telephone call. Not much has changed the statement, although much has changed the political outlook of the Beijing regime. Instead of making that telephone call, the Chinese have summoned senior British officials to Beijing for talks on exactly when and how they will take over the British colony.

The second round of those talks opened [on Tuesday] amid much pompous secrecy from both sides. China has pledged publicly to keep Hong Kong capitalist, at least into the next generation. Britain has pledged publicly to protect the people of Hong Kong" — brave words, but words which, in a crunch, London would be powerless to back up.

Hong Kong is an important port and financial city. New, "progressive" China, aiming to be a world military, economic and political superpower by the end of the century, needs Hong Kong for its vast wealth, the expertise and industriousness of its citizens and the banks there. And Hong Kong, as its residents attest, is indeed Chinese.

But realities are realities, and precipitous demands and actions by Beijing are harmful both to the 5 million Hong Kong residents and the image of China itself to the world. The final disposition of Hong Kong must be reasonable to all parties, most certainly to the capitalist population.

- The Bangkok Post.

When the first round of talks became deadlocked there was a flight of capital out of Hong Kong and the Hong Kong dollar dropped to as low as 7.77 against the U.S. dollar. However, last May Mrs. Thatcher reportedly sent a letter to Mr. Deng indirectly admitting Chinese sovereignty over all of Hong Kong. This has apparently softened the Chinese position.

China's announced policy is to make Hong Kong a "special administrative province." Xi Zhongxun, a Politburo member, has promised that China would not "touch" its capitalistic system even under the next generation of lead-dership. These assurances, coupled with the landslide victory of Mrs. Thatcher's Conserva-tive Party on June 9, have caused the Hong Kong dollar to rebound We hope China and Britain can reach an agreement which is in the best interests of the people of Hong Kong and also protects the prestige of both nations.

- The Daily Yomini (Tokyo).

Mr. Deng and his colleagues are adamant that British rule over Hong Kong should end. They also seem convinced — without a scrap of historical evidence to support them - that the Chinese Communist Party can keep a sufficiently loose rein on a capitalist city like Hong Kong for it to go on prospering.

If this is indeed the Chinese view, Britain's options are decidedly limited. If it rejects China's plans for Hong Kong, it risks provok-ing an open row that will do more damage than if it accepts them. Perhaps the best thing it can do is to acknowledge, or intimate its readiness to acknowledge, the fact that, the lease agreement being what it is, China's claim to sovereignty over Hong Kong is incontestable.

An acknowledgment of this sort should, however, be made contingent upon a clear commitment from Beijing to preserve the ad-ministrative and legal system of Hong Kong largely intact. At the same time, opinion makers and public figures in Hong Kong should be encouraged to speak out in favor of a settlement of this sort, rather than standing in awe of Beijing's pronouncements as they have tended to do until now. Otherwise Chinese leaders will be misled into thinking their present plans for Hong Kong pose no prob-lems for the local population.

- The Times (London). Certainly it is the people of Hong Kong who in this game of diplomatic bluff are wearing the biggest blindfold. Negotiations have to be conducted with proper confidentiality, but the enormous secrecy surrounding the whole issue is excessive. Chinese officials have at least aired their views, although often inconsistently. British officials have done nothing at all to prepare public opinion, least of all in Hong Kong, for the future. - The Guardian (London).

American Civil Rights Are Being Enforced

WASHINGTON — Contrary to much that has been written and said in recent weeks, the Department of Justice is committed without reservation to enforcing America's civil rights laws. Indeed, we are enforcing those laws. Many who charge otherwise know in their hearts that this is true; their real objection can only be to our positions on busing and quotas.

The Civil Rights Act of 1964, together with other civil rights legislation passed before and after that act, gives the department the chief responsibility for ensuring that racial bigotry does not poison the lives of individuals and their communities. Specifically in matters of public education, public employment, housing, credit, voting and that most basic right to be left in peace, able to live without the threat of racial violence, my department must ensure that justice is done when the law is violated. Controversies about the administration's performance of its duties almost since the day we took office have raised questions worthy of continuing debate. But some critics have misrepresented our enforcement record, thus creating unnecessary anxiety about our fundamental commitments.

It is time for the critics to look at what we are doing. No one in good conscience can deny that we are proceeding energetically to enforce the law. Last month we objected to several redistricting plans submitted by counties in Mississippi and also sent federal examiners to counties in that state for the purpose of conducting voter registration.

In May we sued two California firms, challeng-

In May we sued two California firms, challenging the use of an apparent quota system to limit opportunities for blacks to rent apartments.

In April we filed suit against a Georgia state hospital, charging that its credit union required black loan applicants to obtain co-signers while failing to require the same of white loan applicants. Also that mouth, we obtained the conviction of white youths who had beaten to death a young black musician while he was playing jazz one night in a municipal park in Kansas City.

add up, over the past 30 months, to an impressive enforcement record. The highlights of this record include the following:

• In fiscal 1982 the department filed more criminal civil rights cases than had been filed in any previous year. More grand jury investigations were conducted in that year than in any other. • The department has reviewed the electoral changes made since the 1980 census was conducted, as required by law, and objected to 135, including statewide redistricting plans in nine states and the redistricting plan for New York City. • It has been actively involved in more than 100 employment discrimination suits. Fourteen new cases have been filed, and 21 of our cases have been resolved by consent decrees. The department is currently investigating 23 other cases of employment discrimination involving 36 state or local governments and governmental agencies.

• The department has authorized the filing of three school desegregation suits.

• It has conducted more than 60 investigations of discrimination in housing and tried, settled or prepared for trial more than 20 housing cases.

• The department also has broken new ground in its efforts to root out discrimination. Its successful suit against the Chicago Park District marks the first time ever that the federal government has challenged racial discrimination in the allocation of resources within a public park system. And our suit against Cicero, Illinois, still in litigation, marks the first time ever that the federal government has charged both employment and housing discrimination in the same lawsuit.

Suffice it to say that the Justice Department is on the job, doing the job. The law is being enforced. We care about the victims of racial discrimination. We are vigorously pursuing the work of enforcing the national commitment to the eliminahas the impression been spread that we are dismantling the civil rights laws and abandoning the national commitment to a just society free of racial discrimination? I can think of only two reasons: Our open and principled opposition to busing as a remedy for school segregation, and our opposition to quotas, under whatever cuphemism, as a measure or a remedy for job discrimination.

While a candidate, Ronald Reagan clearly and repeatedly stated his position on these issues. The department has endeavored to implement the president's stated philosophy in a way that is princi-pled, effective and consistent with existing law. I am gratified that the administration's views on busing and quotas — long reflective, I believe, of the views of the majority of Americans — are now being characterized more fairly, and even being accepted, by some who have disagreed with them. I shall not rehearse in detail here the arguments against busing and the use of quotas. It is enough to say that, surely, men and women of good will may reasonably believe that busing has not significantly improved educational opportunities for our children — black or white — while it has actually decreased the level of integration as well as the quality of education in many school systems. And surely one may reasonably believe that quotas have not helped many blacks with disadvantaged backgrounds — who most need help and have stigmatized many blacks who have been hired under quota plans.

The goal of this administration is a nation where men and women can be what they dare to be, and what they have been willing to work hard to become it is a nation where individuals are secure secure from criminal violence and illegal threats, harassment and disparagement on the basis of race. It is the job of the Department of Justice to help provide that security. No one can know how many black doctors or Hispanic engin-eers there will be when this goal is obtained. There is no right number, no due proportion. What is right and due is that the choice be there.

WASHINGTON — When So-size Uno, head of the Japan-ese Ministry of International Trade for competition now than four years ago. As a new Commerce Depart-ment report (The Automobile Inago. As a new Commerce Department report ("The Automobile Industry, 1982") indicates, the auto companies have invested more than $43 billion since 1979 to introduce fuel-efficient cars and to modernize plants. At many plants, joint labor-management programs have pro-moted better quality, improved effi-ciency and reduced hostility. But, as the report also makes clear, the terms of competition have changed dramatically. Consider:

• Until the late 1970s, the big three U.S. firms faced no outside competition in the roughly 85 percent of the market represented by large cars. Now, smaller car sizes and larger Japanese and European models mean that U.S. firms face fifths of the market.

· U.S. firms have lost buyers' confidence. In a 1982 survey, Japanese cars scored higher in fuel economy, dependability, workman-ship and "value for money." In the last category, 37 percent of the respondents rated the Japanese "excellent" or "very good," against 23 percent for the Americans.

• The American companies are financially weaker than ever. To finance huge investments they have depleted their working capital, eliminated (Ford and Chrysler) or cut (General Motors) dividends and increased debt. Long-term debt jumped from $500 million in 1979 to $10.9 billion in 1982.

Against that background it is dif-ficult to be optimistic about the not dismal. Before Mr. Uno's pronouncement, Wall Street analysts were predicting that rebounding sales and industry cost-cutting measures would bloat 1984 profits. On estimated sales of 10 million, up from 8 million in 1982, Ann Knight of Paine Webber forecast 1984 profits of $15 a share for GM (against $3.09 in 1982) and $13 for Ford-(against 1980-82 losses of $27). The prospect of unlimited Japan-today's "voluntary" restrictions expire, now clouds these estimates. Not only could the Japanese market share rise from 22.6 percent in 1982, but competition could limit price increases. The Knight projections assume, for example, a 5.5-percent rise in 1984 producer prices.

The tempting way for the in-dustry and the United Auto Workers to neutralize this threat is protectionism. Companies want to maximize sales and pricing power. The new UAW president, Owen Bieber, wants a profitable industry from which to extract a large contract settlement in the fall of 1984.

Down this path of short-term expediency lies long-term ruin. The steel industry and union tried protectionism in the late 1960s and 1970s. Part of the bargain was labor peace, bought with hefty settlements. These squeezed profits and inhibited modernization. Modern protectionism failed to compensate; the industry today is in worse shape.

The rhetoric of protection assumes that the main responsibility for protecting jobs lies with the vernment, not workers and firms. This encourages precisely the sort of irresponsibility that destroys jobs.

With average auto labor costs exceeding $19 an hour in 1982 compared with the U.S. manufacturing average of $11.79 and the Japanese automakers' average of ese imports after March 1984, when $7.22 — it is hard to see the economic or moral basis for a plan intended to raise these costs even further. In practice this wage-price spiral shrinks the industry. From 1978 to 1982, high costs drove car prices up two-thirds faster than average U.S. weekly earnings, squeezing buyers from the market and aggravating the sales slump. GM's propose joint venture with Toyota, plus its plans to import up to 300,000 more Japanese small cars, represents an admission that U.S. production of these cars is not economical. The sobering truth is that only a depression compelled the industry and the union to revise traditional habits. Because the Japanese presence now precludes severe import limits, the only alternative is to compete. The next industry contract ought to reinforce workermanagement cooperation by linking compensation and profitability.

If the Reagan administration takes its rhetoric about low inflation and open trade seriously, it ought to welcome the early Japanese export declaration. Although trying to restore limits may seem politically attractive in the indus-trial Midwest, it sends the wrong signals. But successive presidents have been too timid to send the correct signal. By their silence, they have contributed to America's industrial wreckage.

facilities are available, and whether we can get to practice the kind of medicine we want? Dr. Trehan, who performed nearly 3,000 open-heart operations in New York, had received several offers from Indian hospitals to come back and teach or supervise. But he saw that medical institutions in his homeland lagged by 20 years or more behind U.S. medical centers. He decided to start a new institution. He approached well-to-do acquaintances in India and the United States and gathered commitments totaling almost $15 million — the cost of setting up the new institute. He said continued donations will cover operating costs.

The doctor then persuaded the Indian government to donate three acres of choice property in this sprawling city. Construction is under way and the institute is expected to open in about two years. With its state-of-the-art equip-

"I felt that for me to stay on in the West and keep on being commercially successful would be missing a unique opportunity," Dr. Trehan said. "I felt that to stay on in America would be in a sense morally fraud-ulent, when I was needed in India.

"Nothing that I'd do in New York would really measure up to the challenge of creating a new medical system altogether. We have the commitment and the motivation." What he did not mention was that returning to India would mean a considerable financial sacrifice. But, as Naresh Trehan himself put it, the challenge supersedes commerce. International Herald Tribune

The Threat To Reagan Is Black

By Norman J. Ornstein

WASHINGTON — A late spring meeting in Chicago of black civil rights and political leaders moved black presidential candidacy in 1984 several steps closer to reality.

The informal gathering did not endorse anyone, agreeing only to explore various possibilities; at pre-sent, the Rev. Jesse Jackson seems likely to seek the Democratic nomination. But all this maneuvering raises questions about the likely effect of minority voting in 1984. Any way you look at it, the answer is bad news for the Republicans. Although recent preference polls show Mr. Jackson running third among Democrats — behind former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Ohio's Senator John Glenn - a Jackson candidacy would not be at all likely to expand beyond a black base to turn him into the Democratic nominee against Ronald Reagan. What it would do is spotlight Mr. Jackson in the media, make him a top spokesman for blacks and their concerns and force the other Democratic candidates to articulate support for black-related policy goals.

Of course, it would also have an effect on the prospects of the other Democrats. Conventional wisdom suggests that a Jackson candidacy would hurt Mr. Mondale most. The front-runner would see at least some of his support drained off, particularly among black precinct captains, county chairmen and party officials. A black candidacy could hurt

Whatever its effect on the Democratic nomination, a black candidacy would heighten blacks' interest in presidential politics — leading to more voter registration and therefore a higher turnout. And therein lies the bad news for Republicans.

For months, reports have emanated from the White House that President Reagan had "written off" the black vote. Those reports may be accurate; of more significance, they reflect a political commonplace. There is virtually nothing within the realm of possibility that Ronald Rea-gan could do in 1983 and 1984 that would bring him more than 5 to 10 percent of the black vote.

The real issue, though, is what the black vote will be. How many blacks will turn out at the polls next November? If the black turnout is low or average, a Democratic presidential candidate could get 95 percent of the black vote and still not hurt a Reagan re-election bid. But if the black turnout is high, the threat to Mr.

votes he needs, begins to mount. The Chicago mayoral election demonstrated that blacks, when sufficiently motivated, can turn out in impressive numbers that rival or exceed white turnout. True, Chicago's

All in all there are two factors should cause rising Republican con-cern. A black candidacy in the primaries would inevitably bring a major effort to increase registration of mority voters. All evidence suggests

In other words, the administration is firing up black voters, increasing the chances of a higher turnout in 1984. Add that to a black presidential candidacy, and we could see a record minority turnout next year - giving the Democratic Party a better shot at

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A German Complaint

Germans still pondering the wisdom of having more U.S. rockets on our soil should study your newspaper: insinuations (masked as objective reporting) that German politi-cians who speak of remification are unregenerate extremists; pathologi-. cally anti-German letters from your mailbag that you choose to print: coverage of our country that is often offensively superficial, although always self-confident. The media treatment we receive in the United States itself is yet another story.

All this, and much else, proves how know better than to act like a U.S. lackey and needlessly antagonize the Russians. Not just pacifists and fellow travellers but also middle-of-theroad democrats here would favor a separate deal with Russia. DIETRICH TOEPFER.

Some species of Aedes lay their eggs on dry ground that will be subject to future flooding, and the eggs may survive for as long as two years

Mosquito eggs are laid about a hundred at a time, and the eggs develop and hatch into larvae as soon as adequate water is available to support the larvae through four molts and the final pupal stage that gives rise to the airborne adult. The whole process from egg to bloodthirsty adult is accomplished in about 10 days, and four to five days after her last blood meal, the female is ready to feed and lay again.

Some mosquito larvae eat bac-teria, pollutants and anything else of the right size they can filter from the water. The adult male mosquito is a strict vegetarian that feeds pri-marily on plant juices and nectar, tain flowers. But the females of most species studied to date re-quire, in addition to plant juices, see the light of day. Mr. Davis added that carbon dioxide and lactic acid, a product of muscle metabolism that is found in sweat and on the breath, are the only other definite attractants, and they act at close range.

According to Dr. Craig, the attractiveness of a woman (10 a mosquito) varies with the menstrual cycle. Women are most attractive around the time of ovulation, and least so during menstruation. In general, people differ in attractiveness (given a choice, mosquitoes will bite the most attractive person available, leaving others relatively unbothered), and the same person may be more or less attractive on different occasions. Dr. Craig said. To decrease one's ability to whet a mosquito's appetite, Mr. Davis suggests frequent bathing to reduce body temperature and lactic acid buildup on the skin and "eating a lot of garlicky Italian food." Garlic, an old wives tale as a mosquito repellent, seems to work, he said. Garlic extract contains a potent larvicide that in one laboratory test wiped out 100 percent of five different species of mosquitoes.

Researchers are also interested in what attracts male mosquitoes to females, for if Cupid's arrow could somehow be blunted, the next gensee the light of day. The hum of a female's wings that can drive a per-son crazy all night is the very sound that drives the male into a sexual

But since all mosquito wings sound pretty much alike, how does the male find females of the right

The most effective anti-mosquito techniques are larvicides used in the water where mosquitoes breed. One, Altosid SR-10, a regulator of mosquito growth, prevents the emergence of adult floodwater mosquitoes by keeping the insect in a permanent juvenile stage.

Another effective biological weapon is the bacterium. Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis, which the larvac cat only to be poisoned by a bacterial toxin. Sex Hormones Aid Hemophiliacs

BOSTON (UPI) — Sex hormones decrease bleeding in hemophiliacs and may reduce their dependency on blood transfusions blamed for spreading diseases such as AIDS, doctors say. Preliminary research indicated a form of the male sex hormone androgen can increase elements in the blood that help it to clot, two studies reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The studies "add pieces to the emerging picture" of sex hormones' role in regulating hemophilia and other diseases not previously thought to be affected by them, an accompanying editorial said.

This clinical information has become very important in view of the rising concern about the risk of acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS)," said the editorial by Dr. Jeffrey A. Gelfand of Boston's Tufts-

New England Medical Center. Treatment with danazol, a weak form of androgen, decreased hemorrhaging in four people with hemophilia and one with a related disorder called Christmas disease. It also reduced the patients' need for blood transfusions, said researchers at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland.

The WHO also announced that a European conference will be con vened at Aarhus in the middle of October to gather AIDS-researchers from the world over and coordinate research methods. AIDS is an incurable viral illness which has spread to 16 countries and claimed more than 2,000 victims, predominantly homosexuals. "Six hundred people have so far died of the illness," said Donald Hopkins, Assistant Director of the American Center for Disease Control. "Few have lived more than two years after having contracted the virus. None has lived more than

Ventriloquism Practiced by Crickets

B AGUIO, Philippines (Reuters) — Crickets, nature's violinists, are also ventriloquists and may even act as thermometers, according to research workers at a northern Philippines university.

Michael Alocod, an entomologist, said research teams at Mountain State Agricultural College found that crickets could direct the sound of their churp by raising and lowering their forewings as they sawed the "file" on one wing against the "scraper" on the other. "Crickets become ventiloquists to deceive their pursuers. Even in a laboratory we found it hard to locate a cricket when it wanted to evade us," he said.

Homing of Pigeons Linked to Smell

MUNICH (Reuters) — West German scientists say they have conducted experiments confirming a theory that homing pigeons navigate by sense of smell.

Researchers from the Max Planck Institute for Physiological Behavior at Seewiesen, in Bayaria, say that their experiments show that homing pigeons could normally return to base from a distance of about 700 kilometers (450 miles). But if the birds' sense of smell was suppressed their maximum navigation radius was reduced to just 50 kilometers (30

They said it was possible there was a mystery substance in the atmosphere whose concentrations helped pigeons, and other birds, to Developers of the device say it has more dexterity and usefulness than others currently used in industry. The hand, called the Pennsylvania Articulated Mechanical Hand, has three fingers, each with two joints, and one of the fingers can move about the base of the hand to oppose the other two, imitating the function of the thumb, said Dr. Burton Paul, professor of mechanical engineering at the university.

TWO TRIBS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

If you purchased this Trib at a newsstand, you're already enjoying a rare bargain—the whole world in just a few tightly written, factpacked pages. You're reading a product created by scores of journalists working day and night from dozens of distant datelines to bring you a compact compilation which can be purchased for the price of a cup of coffee.

But why not double the bargain? Enjoy twice as many newspapers with double the headlines, business trends, candid commentary, high fashion and comic strip hi-jinks, exciting sports and puzzling crosswords.

By subscribing to the International Herald Tribune for six months or a year, you save almost half the newsstand price on each copy.

WALL STREET WATCH

By EDWARD ROHRBACH

Experts on a U.S. Television Show Have Been Beating the Dow Average

T en million Americans can't be wrong — every Friday night they watch "Wall Street Week," making it a top-rated television show on the Public Broadcasting System.

The host, Louis Rukeyser, irreverent and witty about the market, takes the approach that investors, particularly the "little guys," have the right to get straight answers from the experts. Friday's guest is Martin S. Feldstein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

The show's producer, Rich Dubroff, said he always instructs guest experts before coming on to act "like you're talking to truck drivers — and the economists will understand." Mr. Rukeyser, himself, makes it a point to emphasize the hazards of investing, and he frequently warns viewers that even top stock pickers and market timers often goof. And for perspective, he adds: "It's only your money, not your life." People are too jittery about the money supply

All the guest panelists appearing on "Wall Street Week" — 17 since the first of the year - have beaten the performance of the Dow Jones average in their stock selections for 1983. Robert Nurock, who manages his own investment advisory — figures that even the

Fed itself finds difficult to interpret.'

ages ms own investment advisory service in Philadelphia, stands tallest, with a big 60 percent gain. Incidentally, Mr. Nurock's "elves," 10 technical indicators displayed each show, are currently flashing a "sell" signal on the market.

Regular panelists in their 1983 recommendations are led by Bernadette Bartels of Shaw & Co., with a 56 percent gain. Her new picks for the year's second half are Big Three, Tandem, Polaroid, Ozark and Piedmont. She expects the Dow to close at 1,305, its high for the year, with a 1,095

Pete Calhoun, of Emerging Growth Partners, has racked up a 47 arcent increase and likes Hastings Manufacturing, UMC Electronics, Halliburton, Plantronics, Subaru and Spex Industries. He envisions a 1,325 high on Dow, a low of 1,046 and a close of 1,275.

Martin Zweig, editor of Zweig Forecast, is up 45 percent so far in 1983, and recommends Durr-Fillauer, USAir, Cirysler, General Defense, Raymond Engineering, CooperVision and Trust Co. of Georgia. His forecast for the Dow is the most bullish: a 1,340 year-end close—also the high—

Monte Gordon, research director at Dreyfus, has had a 20 percent increase in his picks. From here on out he recommends Chrysler, Ford, SmithKline Beckman, Wall-Mart, Prime Computer, Snap-On Tools, Magic Chef and Caterpillar. He figures that the Dow will hit a high of 1,330 at year-end, touching a low of 1,150 in the last six months of 1983.

Last year, in their mid-1982 review, panelists were bears just like about everyone else on Wall Street. The Dow on July 2 stood at 797, only 20 points short of its ultimate 1982 low. Their average prediction for the year's high was 869, compared with 1,070 actual and a year-end 831, while the Dow actually closed at 1,047. Their average low forecast was 711, with Mr. Zweig — who quickly became one of the market's top stock pickers after the August rally began — guessing a low of 640. Stay timed.

Seeing Market as Secular

"We're constructive on U.S. stocks because the trend in interest rates is down, not up," said Hermann Schweizer, manager of institutional invest-ments at Bank Julius Bār in Zurich. "We see the bull market as secular rather than cyclical, hopefully lasting years."

Short-term, he allowed, there may be a correction, but only a mild pullback, with the damage mainly hitting individual stocks where carnings projections fall short.

"People are too jittery about the money supply—figures that even the Fed itself finds difficult to interpret — and it's a little ridiculous for so many outside 'experts' to pretend they know better," said Mr. Schweizer, who recently visited Washington, D.C., and the Federal Reserve.

Pan Am Restructuring, Aided By Traffic Jump, Paying Off

By Agis Salpukas

NEW YORK - From the September day when he took over the helm at Pan American World Airways two years ago, C. Edward Acker has had to scramble to buy the time he needed to restructure the company. As losses mounted, scaring off travel agents and passengers who feared the company's demise, it looked at times like Mr. Acker might be losing the battle.

But with the economy recovering and airline traffic suddenly soaring, Mr. Acker now appears to be win-ning his fight. Pan Am's passenger loads are rising, and the airline's cash flow is now positive. Even employee morale appears to have turned around.

"We have a much stronger company.now," said Mr. Acker, who is chairman, president and chief executive officer at Pan Am.

Mr. Acker is not alone in his assessment. Competitors are beginning to take Pan Am more seriously.

And Wall Street analysts and investors are looking with new interest at the airline as a turnaround play. The stock, which had plummeted to 2½ last year, has begun to climb. It closed at $7.875 Tuesday. Two of e company's securities offerings so far this year have

"They are making hay while the sun is out," said Robert J. Joedicke, an industry analyst at Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., who predicted that Pan Am will be able to cash in on the flood of U.S. tourists to Europe this summer, and that profit for this quarterthe Scandinavian countries.

The official said the consultations would probably take place during the week of July 25. The makes the company's strongest — may be enough to tide it through the rest of the year.

Mr. Acker, who had earned a reputation as a pragmatic and decisive manager as chairman and chief

At Pan Am, Mr. Acker moved quickly to cut costs, gain labor concessions and restructure its route sys-tem. At that time, National's domestic routes simply did not mesh with Pan Am's international system. Mr. Acker shifted most of the domestic fleet to feed into Kennedy International Airport, the center of Pan Am's international service.

Most of the workers affected by these changes were former National employees, many of whom had re-mained loyal to the old airline, leading to a deterioration in service for a time. But now the route system is working smoothly, and employee discontent has

The changes started to yield dividends earlier this year. With the rationalization of the new routing system, more agents began to book clients on Pan Am's domestic and international flights. Advance bookings for next month, particularly for travel to Europe, are up about 18 percent from a similar period

The increase in passenger traffic began to bring in more revenue. The company's cash flow, always best during the summer vacation season, has improved. Chrysler to Pay Off Last of U.S.-Backed Loans 7 Years Early

WASHINGTON - Chrysler Corp., the No. 3 U.S. automaker, has recovered enough from its financial woes to pay off the last $800 million of $1.2 billion in federally guaranteed loans seven years early, Lee A. Jacocca, chairman, said

The loans, which are owed to private lenders but guaranteed by the government, were not due to be paid off until 1990. When they were granted in 1980 and 1981, many observers doubted that they would be paid off at all.

The guarantee plan had been ap-proved by Congress and President amy Carter in late 1979 and early 1980 as a way of saving Chrysler, which was widely seen as on the brink of bankruptcy.

Mr. Iacocca, in his speech at the National Press Club, lauded the cooperation of the government, the company and its employees in bringing Chrysler back.

"In a way, maybe it was social democracy at its best," Mr. Iacocca said. "We had help from all levels of government — Capitol Hill, the White House, the state house and city hall. And my question is simp-ly this: What is so wrong with

Since the first loans in 1980, Chrysler has managed a financial the first quarter this year.

Wall Street analysts said that Chrysler was expected to post second-quarter earnings of $290 million, which would set a quarterly earnings record for the company. And officials said in Detroit Wednesday that company car sales in early July were up 51 percent from the like period of last year. General Motors' sales rose 48.1 percent in the period.

Chysler's decision last month to repay part of the loans early caused criticism by union officials who complained that the automaker's workers were being paid far less than their counterparts at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 automakers, respectively.

The workers had given up millions of dollars in benefits and pay increases as their share of keeping their employer afloat.
Mr. Iacocca said Wednesday,

"The United Auto Workers and its members want to share in our success, and we expect to sit down with them shortly and talk it out." He also mentioned but did not resolve another issue concerning warrants to buy 14.4 million shares of Chrysler stock at $13 each which the company gave the government as part of the loan-guarantee deal. The stock's price has risen along with the automaker's fortunes, and it was selling from Congress and elsewhere. Mr. Iacocca said, "We have got to straighten out the warrants issue. I don't want to get into that here, but we will do what's fair and I am sure the government will, too." Marlin Fitzwater, a Treasury spokesman, said the guarantee board "considered the warrants question but reached no conclusion. The board indicated they do intend to deal with the issue expeditiously and to resolve the issue relatively soon."

After a $453-million loss last year, the company's losses began to narrow in the first quarter, a trend that Mr. Acker said would continue. He declined, however, to give specific earnings projections because the company is still in a 90-day registration period for a stock Climbed 0.7% in June

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Mostly From Talbot, Unionists Say

PARIS (Reuters) - Peugeot plans to abolish 7,570 jobs, mainly in production, through early retirement and layoffs, trade union sources said Wednesday. Peugeot declined comment on the report until a meeting with the unions July 21.

Industry sources said the Talbot division, which reportedly would take the bulk of the job losses at its Poissy factory west of Paris, had lost much of its share of the French car market. Sales fell to 4.9 percent of the market in the first half of 1983, from 5.6 percent in the half last year. Pengeot had a net consolidated loss last year of 2.15 billion francs ($279 million), compared with 1.99 billion in 1981.

Ambrosiano Administrators Named

LUXEMBOURG (Renters) - Three partners from the London office of the U.S. accounting firm Touche Ross & Co. were appointed administrators of Banco Ambrosiano Holding (Luxembourg) at a special general meeting Tuesday after the June 8 resignations of the bank's board were accepted, the bank said Wednesday in a statement.

The directors resigned because of a conflict of interest between the mon stock, worth about $1 billion board and the majority shareholder, Nuovo Banco Ambrosiano of Milan, over the sales of the Luxembourg bank's assets to meet creditors' trees said the conflict arose from the board's having represented the bank's creditors rather than its shareholders. The Milan bank did not approve of the board's plan to sell assets of the holding company, which is in default on debts of about $400 million.

Pan Am still does not have as many of its own domestic flights flying in and out of Kennedy International as some of its competitors, so it has had to offer lower "fill-up fares" to encourage people to fly its planes. In some instances, domestic carriers have chosen not to match the lower fares of Pan Am, giving it a small advantage in some markets

Passengers such as Robert Mar tin, a businessman relocated to Houston whose family is still in Cleveland, have helped Pan Am to fill its feeder flights and defray the cost of the feeder system. From Sushi to Shipbuilding: Innovation in Japan's Robots

By Steve Lohr

TOKYO - It's not quite that there are hordes of unemployed robots sitting around waiting for the economy to pick up. But the going is getting a bit tougher for Japan's of 1982, even this buoyant industry was feeling the effects of the worldwide economic slump. The demand for robots started to ebb. Prices have been cut 30 percent or more in a field now crowded with about 200 companies producing robots.

nicks up steam and customers start spending again. Analysts predict that the Japanese robot industry will grow by more than 30 percent this year to more than $775 million as measured by production value.

In the meantime, Japanese com-panies have shown no letup in their search for new jobs for today's ro-bots and this is why a nation the size of California has more robots in use than the rest of the world all together. As the leading producer and consumer of robots, Japan is the robotics laboratory of the

In typically Japanese fashion, the response to the intensified com-petition has been to step up the pace of product innovation. For the most part, the new technology is aimed at moving the state of the art forward by modest steps, not technological leaps. The focus is on making robots that move faster and more precisely weigh less, con-sume less energy and perform more "intelligently." Here's a look at what's happening in the trend-set-ting Japanese robotics industry:

fond of sushi is the entertainment. You watch the sushi chef, hands darting expertly, not only slicing the raw fish but also fashioning the little patties of rice atop which the fish slices rest. But thanks to Suzumo Machin-

The fish, however, still must be sliced by hand and stacked on the rice pattie.

The sushi robot is a simple device and purists may sniff that it is not really a robot at all. Still, its arm and claw seem to qualify it as what is called a fixed-sequence ro-bot, a rudimentary type that essentially performs the same task repea-

SO I pick up this book called "Deuces Wild," the first novel by a French screenwriter named Bernard Lenteric, who according writer named beraard Lenteric, who according to the dust jacket, was for seven years cousidered his country's best poker player. It's a terrible title, even more clicked than the French version, "La Gagne" (The Winner). But I happen to enjoy poker, as well as books whent the country of 1 that standard. about the game, so I start reading.

The first section, called "Prologue: The Draw," takes place in a slaughterhouse, where two homosexual butchers are luring a couple of kids who have beaten them in an earlier game. kids who have beaten them in an earner game. The plan is for the men to frighten the kids with the awful smell of the place and the presence of a horrible slughke individual known as Hacek from Chicago, and then to win back their money. The scene is pretty sordid and unsubtle, but if you'll pardon a terrible pun, I'm hooked. Anyway, I see that the rest of the chapters are called "Onening the rest of the chapters are called "Opening Deal: High Card." "Second Deal: One Pair," "Third Deal: Two Pairs" and so forth, all the way to "Ninth and Last Deal: Straight Flush;" which also keeps me in the game, in a manner of speaking.

As it develops, I have no idea what these titles have to do with the action in the chapters. But part of the reason for my incomprehension is that I'm too absorbed in the story to stop and ignre out what "Straight" and "Flush" have to do with what "Straight" and "Flush" have to do with what s going on. All I know is that a young man from San Francisco named Benedict Sarkissian is being trained by his Armenian grandfather, a coin dealer known as King Hov, to take on a multibillionaire banker, Alex Van Heeren, whose passion is power and poker and whom for reasons that shufe me. King and whom, for reasons that clude me, King Hov regards as a hated Turk. The old man knows that his grandson is ready for this challenge because he is cool and steady enough to balance three gold coins standing up on edge on top of one another, even with his grandfather shouting insults at him.

This is interesting. Even more interesting is the way that Ben initiates his challenge to Van Heeren. Through mutual acquaintances, he gets into a high-stakes game with his target, plays for a while in the precise, ritualistic. abstract manner that fascinates everyone who knows him (especially women) and then suddenly, at the end of four hours, announces that he's lost his $20,000 state and that all of it has gone to Van Heeren. Everyone, especially Van Heeren, realizes that, "To lose exactly $20,000. to lose it in such a way that only Van Heeren won it to lose it in exactly four hours, the last dollar at the last minute. Sarkissian had to see through the banker's game in airrost Stelly hand, guessing when Van Herren could with and when he would lose." That meant that Ben had been in control every second of the game, through every one of the 200 deals.

On top of this, Ben hands over his losses to Van Heeren in envelopes marked "With the compliments of the Van Heeren Bank," where Ben is employed in a mental job. Van Hocren is Ben is employed in a menual job. Van richten is furious. He retaliates by arranging to have lien whipped by a couple of thugs. Ben "calls" this "raise" by showing up at the bank the nant day pretending to feel no pain. The contest is on, and the story is well begun. There's a poculiar attraction about this clash of egos that Leuteric seems to understand very well. As Calliope Leutern a beingiful program whose favors Ben-Jordaan, a beautiful woman whose favors Benedict and Van Heeren somehow come to share. points out to Ben: "Of course, there's a trace of homosexuality in all this. You know it. You even capitalize on it."

And not only does the guthor evines this psychological insight, but he also succeeds in lending a mythological dimension to his story.
"Tall-lale telling" might be a better way of putting it. But however you want to describe it. the story works.

The only thing that really bothers me as I'm reading along is that not one of the poker games that Ben keeps winning in the course of the duel is actually described. All that Leaseric will say is that even when buck is against him. win say is mat even when hick is against furk. Ben Sarkissian keeps winning like a machine. This vagueness begins to amony me so extremely that I make up my mind that if the story winds up without a single game's being recounted. I'm going to give away the ending an assiter how eleverly the lack of actual poker is finessed. After all, he has lured ma with poker, and by golly, he had better give me some poker?

But now that I've finished the book, I've changed my mind. I'm not going to tell the ending, though that doesn't necessarily mean't describes some specific games. All I'm willing to say is that, in the end, Ben gets into the biggest game of his fife. Not only does he have to go to against Death himself, but he coun has to play a couple of Texans! it's very clewedy worked out. If you think I'm hhiffing you, all you have to do is read "Dences Wild."

Watson Set to Resume His Love Affair With the British Open

By John Radosta

New York Times Service NEW YORK - The piper.

The memory that Tom and Linda Watson cherish the most is of the bagpiper who walked beneath their botel window in the Scottish gloaming, serenading Watson after his victory in the 1977 British Open at Watson's four victories in the Open championship have all come in Scotland, and each has been saluted in some way by bagpipers - on the golf course, at the presentation or at the airport. But Turnberry was special. Watson considers it the most joyous of his victories. He had beaten Jack Nicklaus by one stroke in one of the most exciting head-to-head competitions in modern golf.

Moreover, Watson has a continuing love affair with the Scots, whom he calls "the most civilized society left

He came alive in the United States Open at Oaknont, Pennsylvania, last month, where he had victory in his grasp until he bogeyed three holes on the final nine and finished a stroke behind Larry Nelson. But Watson says he salvaged something valuable from that second-place finish — it restored his confidence.

> In general, Americans initially dislike links courses (Bobby Jones detested St. Andrews the first time). Nor do they consider them beautiful. In the long run, however, beauty is in the eye of the beholder.

"They have their own subtle beauties," Watson explains. "There's a lot of strategy involved in British golf courses. Sometimes the strategy can be extremely severe, like the strategy at Oakmont. "But basically they are very fair. If there's no wind, there's not usually a lot of hazard. But when the wind blows 10 miles an hour, the wind is the hazard, the major hazard. We build our golf courses with more hazards than just the wind."

One of the reasons the business got into difficulty is the female gender problem. Women still don't appreciate the value of a home computer and what it can do to

Five-Course Meal Pushes Ice Cream

United Press Intern

PITTSBURGH — About 50 ourmets celebrated National Ice Cream Week at an elegant outdoor café dinner in which each of the five courses contained some form of ice cream. Even the champagne cocktails Tuesday night contained a small scoop of sherbet.

The event was a promotion for a recently opened ice cream parlor near the University of Pittsburgh.

The dinner began with cold posched salmon with sorrel-caper mayonnaise, followed by iced avo-cado-pineapple soup. The main course was a light filet of beef shish kebab featuring a rum-raisin mar-inade. And for dessert, any one of 23 flavors of ice cream with varied

"I already know it."
"Okay, forget the calendar. Let's take an inventory of everything we have in the house."

"At 11 o'clock at night?" "Why not? Once we record it on a disk, and we have a fire, we'll know what was lost."

Suppose the computer gets burned up in the fire?" "We won't keep the disk in the house. We'll put it in my office, and a printout in the bank's safety deposit box."

Samantha Smith Bids Farewell to Yalta Hosts

Samentha Smith says she will "re-main friends across the sea" with the Young Pioneers of the Crimean youth camp where she spent four days at the invitation of the Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov. "I love you," the 11-year-old American girl told some 400 campers to loud applause during a farewell ceremony in Yalta. "My stay at sea camp in Artek has been wonderful, very wonderful," she said in a speech translated into Russian for the campers. The farewell speech was written by her father, Arthur, who said his daughter "went speechless" at a welcome din-ner last Sannday night. Samantha, then used a microphone to join the other children in a chorus of the Russian song "Always Young."
"Come again to Artek," the children chanted as the Smiths departed for Leningrad. They will return to Moscow before ending their trip July 21. . . The Soviet Union is exploiting Samentha to poatray itself as a promoter of world peace, says Malcolm Toon, a former U.S. ambassador to Moscow. Toon said the girl's visit is a Moscow move to "demonstrate that at least they are generally interested in a peaceful world, and if it turns cut not to be that way, it's the nlt of somebody else." Toon was the U.S. envoy to the Kremlin from 1976 to 1979.

The Italian journalist Oriana Fallack known for her biting interviews of international political figures, ran afoul of the Argentine press in Buenos Aires. There to promote her book, "A Man," on the life of her former companion, the Greek politician Alekos Panaguik, she harshly citicized Argentine newsmen at a press conference. Dozens of journalists objected loudly, and all but one of the radio and TV talk shows canceled plans to interview her.

The American folk singer Joan Baez hunched with French President François Mitterrand Wednesday at the Elysée Palace. "We talked about a lot of things," Baez said after the hunch. For me the subject was nonviolence, for him it was many, many subjects." The singer is giving a free concert Friday in the Place de la Concorde. "Til sing love songs, all songs, but the concert, once again, is dedicated to nonviolence," she said.
